An early American Lutheran Hymnal, in original German, reflecting the heavy immigration of Germans into the United States in the Nineteenth Century. The first German Reformation hymnal was published in 1524, and included hymns written by Martin Luther. Over 100 hymns, with words, are included in this hymnal.

2. [Americana]. New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad

New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Electrification. (Special Publication 1698). Pittsburgh. Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company. 1924. 4to. 28cm, 42,(1)pp., with 70 figures (photos, diagrams& schematics), original stiff grey wraps with embossed title on front, light soiling to covers, very good to fine

With Foreword by C. L. Bardo, General Manager of the Railroad.: " The original electrification of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad on its New York Division virtually was the result of a legislative enactment of May 7, 1903. This required that the Grand Central Terminal and approaches within the limits of the city of New York, should, within approximately five years, be operated with some form of motive power not requiring combustion. As no form of motive power, other than electricity, was feasible, or economical for service, electricity was decided upon". A detailed study with schematic diagrams & plans. With an added stamp of the Canadian Westinghouse Company Ltd., Hamilton, Ontario.

3. [Americana. Medicine]. - BAXLEY, H. Willis

What I Saw on the West Coast of South and North America, and at the Hawaiian Islands. New York. D. Appleton & Company. 1865. tall8vo, 24.2cm, The First Edition, 632p., plus added frontis & plate illustrations from engravings, text illus., in the original purplish blue cloth, gilt spine titles and upper cover illustration, the spine, cover and text edges have ink speckles, the book boards has some fade spots, the title is visible, finished light yellow endpapers, expertly restored with nearly all the original spine cap relayed, several pages have minor fore edge chips, considering the book production and paper of the day, this is a very good sound copy 250.00

4. [Americana_Revolution - FRANCE].

Decret de la Convention Nationale, Des 19 Fevrier 1793, l'an second dela République Française. Relatifs aux denrées exportées ou importées par les vaisseaux Américains dans les Colonies ou en France. Marseille. 1793. 4to., 26x 21cm, one sheet folded to 4 pages and printed on 3, uncut, fine condition 300.00

A "favoured nation" policy, allowing the United States the same rights as French ships going into and out of the ports of France and her colonies. This was the year in which Louis XVI was executed, the Reign of Terror began, the Holy Roman Empire declared war on France, and the United States proclaimed its neutrality. This decree is officially stamped at the end of the final page of text.

The Very Rare First Edition, London, 1755.

While there is a map that is sometimes found with this edition or with the second London edition, this map was in fact issued after the publication of both editions and is often found with the 1760 edition of Douglas' "Summary of the British Settlements in North America" which was also published by Dodsley. There has been some discussion about whether the work was written by Ellis Huske, who died in 1755, or by his eldest son, John, (1721?-1773). A second edition "with Emendations" was published in London and two editions were published in Boston, all in the same year, but this first edition of Huske's angry denunciation of French policy in America is very rare.

One of the best contemporary accounts of travels to the northern mines of California. Tyson journeyed by way of Panama, and arrived in California on May 18, 1849. He was the first competent professional physician to record for the prospective emigrant information for the preservation of his health both while en route and while in the mines. Kurutz notes that "Tyson's book is important in that it not only describes his adventures, but also includes advice on how to stay healthy for those crossing the Isthmus or working in the mines. He wrote: 'I never saw so many broken-down constitutions as during my brief stay in California.'" This copy lacks the title-leaf (pp.1-2), but, as Kurutz notes, the wrapper title is the same save for the addition of "The Land of Promise" above the border.

10. BARTLETT, W.H. & The Literary Department by N.P. Willis

Canadian Scenery Illustrated. From Drawings by W.H. Bartlett. London. Virtue & Co., City Road and Ivy Road. [1842]. 4to., 26.2cm, in 2 volumes, [iv],128 & [ii],116pp., plus engraved illustrated title pages, engraved map & 117 steel engraved plate illustrations, in the original half dark blue calf, gilt decorated raised bands, crushed crimson and black morocco labels, gilt titles, matched blue green marbled boards and endpapers, top edges gilt, some slight wear on the binding edges, a very good to fine set attractively bound

Seven plates have some foxing, otherwise they are clean, clear and bright. Notable for the high degree of contrast found in nineteenth century steel engravings - sets free of foxing have become somewhat difficult to find 900.00

Note: The steel engraved plates were done in 1840-1841 and were still in use as late as 1884. William Withrow's A Popular History of the Dominion of Canada... 2 volumes 1884, had twenty-four Bartlett engraved plates. Given the title page imprint this issue was probably about 1855. There is talk that late plate wear produced weaker images but I have seen no evidence of that. There is no imprint or date on these plates, titles only, another indication of later pulls.

William Henry Bartlett, 1809-1854, a noted traveller and highly skilled landscape artist, visited Canada four times between 1836 and 1852. He provided some twenty travelogues with brief texts. The prose text by Willis relates the history and current conditions in Upper and Lower Canada about 1839-40". - Canadian Scenery is considered Bartlett's finest production (Sabin). - "A very deep impression upon the pictorial history of Canada was made by William Henry Bartlett, artist and illustrator". Spendlove. Bartlett's original water-colour drawings for Canadian Scenery are in the ROM and are fantastic.

The Nile Boat: or, Glimpses of the Land of Egypt. London. Bll & Daldy. Nd. [1870?]. sq8vo., 22x 15.5cm, A New Edition, vi, (2),229p., with 35 steel engraved plate illustrations and maps, including extra engraved title, frontis and a folding map, plus 17 woodcut text illustrations,

In elaborate special binding: full contemporary lacquered tortoiseshell binding, bevelled boards, the upper cover with gilt decorated borders and an illustration of a ship under sail on the

Nile, backed in brown morocco spine elaborated gilt illustrated and decorated, moire patterned endpapers; all edges gilt, neat small book label on front paste-down (Thomas Fielden), printed on extra stock paper, the book does not open flat, a fine copy, rare in thus extraordinary binding 900.00

First published in 1849. With an historical introduction by Samuel Sharpe indicating all of the illustrations "were drawn upon the spot, many of them with the Camera Lucida". These drawings form the basis for the engravings in the book, except for the material from Abu Simbel, which Bartlett did not reach because of illness.

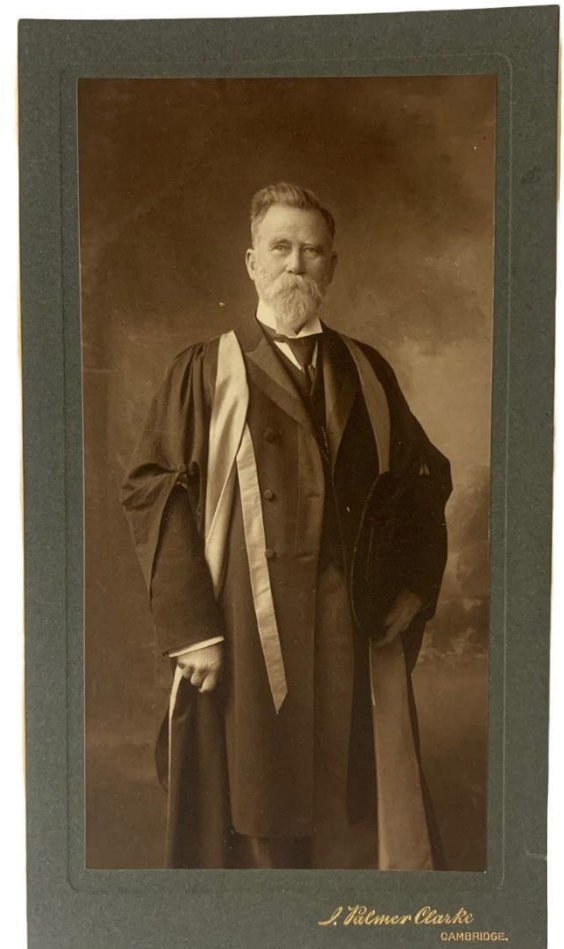

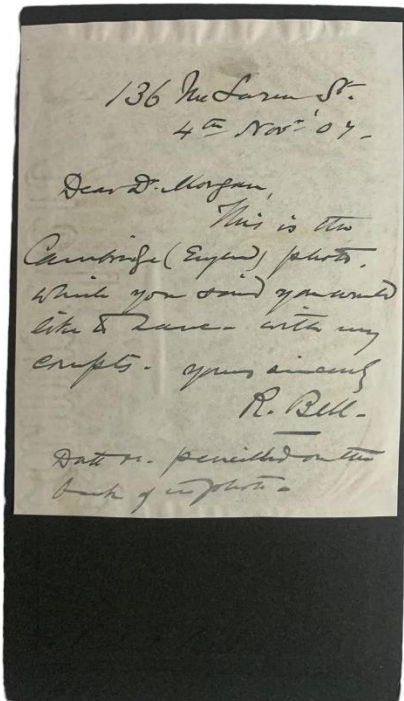

Some things we will never see again - this is one of them

"London, Ont. 1860", is written along the bottom lightly in pencil in earlier hand of John Mappin, Canadian Antiquarian bookseller, who handled more broadsides, printed ephemera and pamphlets than anyone else in that era.

FYI: Behemoth is a beast from the biblical Book of Job, and is a form of the primeval chaos-monster created by God at the beginning of creation. This connotation would have wide spread interest in the era when people generally carefully read their bibles. Very few homes then would have had more than one book in them but nearly everyone would have a bible.

This broadside offers land for sale in the Townships of Dereham & Norwich, in the Western District. Print signed at the base, in the text: John Small, C.E.C.

Tremaine Supplement, Fleming & Alston, 1146. [Abrahamson]. Canadian History, Off The Wall. (p13).

See also Tremaine 1144, citing a broadside printed in York, July 3rd, 1799, which announced the imminent sale of these same lands.

John Small (1746-1831).. came to Canada in 1792 and in 1793 he was appointed clerk of the Executive Council of Upper Canada. This position he held at York, until his death in 1831. cf. D.C.B.

"... Small is best known for the duel on 3 Jan. 1800 in which he mortally wounded John White*, the attorney general. Mrs Small had publicly snubbed the notoriously quarrelsome Mrs White. White reacted by questioning the legality of Small's marriage and the morals of his wife in a letter to David William Smith*, which was communicated to Chief Justice John Elmsley* and received credence in York society. Small insisted upon immediate satisfaction, without determining how much of the gossip had actually come from White. He was acquitted on a charge of murder after a brief trial, despite the hostility of the presiding judge, Henry Allcock*.

The affair ruined both Mrs Small's reputation and the connection that Small had formed with the Russells, Macaulays, and Macdonells of Collachie. Peter Russell*, who at Newark in May 1795 had defended Small against an anonymous libel, was White's friend and executor. When Small sought election to the House of Assembly in July 1800 he was defeated; and in a second attempt at a by-election a year later he was crushed, 112 votes to 32, by Angus Macdonell* (Collachie). Of his former friends, Joseph Willcocks* and the elder Robert Baldwin voted for him. On New Year's Day 1806 Elizabeth Russell would still acknowledge him only by "a distant curtsey." Two years later, Mrs Small's invitation to a governor's levee occasioned resentment.

As clerk of the council, Small was paid £100 a year – less than an unskilled labourer and only slightly more than the senior of his two clerks – besides being entitled to about one-fifteenth of land fees. He had inherited property in Gloucestershire which he disposed of some time before the end of 1795. Forbidden in 1797 to collect fees from loyalists and unsuccessful in petitions for a higher stipend, he was able to establish his family by speculating in land at York. One of the first officials to buy a house there, in August 1795, he had accumulated over 2,500 acres before beginning to sell lots in 1797 and he continued to acquire and sell land. By the 1820s the rise in York land prices had made him prosperous.

He also regained a position in York society. An active churchman (his brother was prebendary of Gloucester Cathedral), he was a trustee of the York District grammar school by 1811 and soon after found a patron in John Strachan* Small even achieved some political influence under Administrator Samuel Smith, to whom Strachan thought him "a considerable Adviser." He launched one son, James Edward*, on a successful career as a lawyer and reform politician; the youngest, Charles Coxwell, succeeded him in the clerkship of the crown and pleas as well as in his militia commission. His house at York, handsomely rebuilt by Charles Coxwell, stood until 1925." D.C.B. VI- by S. R. Mealing..

Canadian Incunabula, in Canada is printing before 1800. The Oxford Dictionary tells us that broadsides go back as far as 1575. However the first printing press here were in Halifax in 1751, in Quebec, 1764, in Montreal 1776 (see Mesplet below), and in Upper Canada in 1793.

First Act Regulating Public Houses for the Sale of Spirituous Liquors

19. [BROADSIDE]. - UPPER CANADA. (Niagara-on-the-Lake). Laws, Statutes, etc.

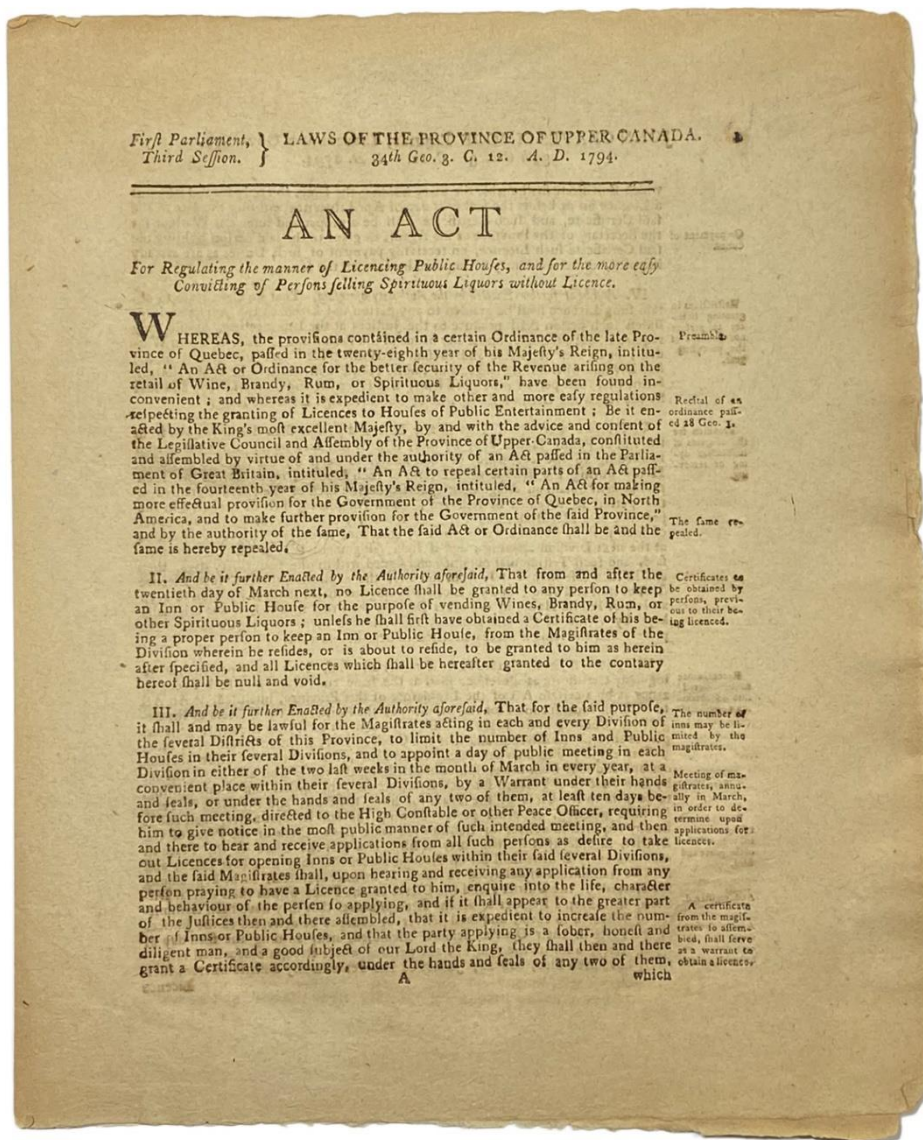

First Parliament, Third Session. Laws of the Province of Upper Canada. 34th Geo.3. C.12. A.D. 1794. An Act for Regulating the manner of Licencing Public Houses, and for the more easy Convicting of Persons selling Spirituous Liquors without Licence... [Newark, U.C., Probably by Louis Roy. 1794]. 4to. 27cm, 1 sheet, 4 printed pages (20x 15cm), captain title, uncut, fine condition 500.00

Not in Tremaine or TPL.

A separately printed copy of this act and not abstracted from the Collected Statutes of 1795. (This copy is separately paginated and differs in size from the later collected version). As the third session of the First Parliament ended on July 4th, 1794, and Tiffany who succeeded Roy did not receive his commission until November, 1794.

This act introduces for the first time in Upper Canada, legislation and regulations to govern the licensing of Public Houses for the Sale of Spirituous Liquors to the public. Almost certainly printed by Louis Roy, the first printer of Upper Canada, this is the first Liquor Licensing Act of Upper Canada.

"In 1792 Lt.-Gov. John Graves Simcoe proclaimed West Niagara the capital of Upper Canada and renamed it Newark, since it provided a place for the Loyalists. The name also recalled Newark upon Trent in Norttinghamshire, England... The first five sessions of Upper Canada's Legislature were held here, the last being on 3 June 1796, after which York (now Toronto) was the site of subsequent sessions. Simcoe named Newark Township in 1792 but the residents preferred Niagara and had that name reinstated by law in 1798". Rayburn. Place Names of Ontario p241.

- The Times. London, Thursday, November 7, 1805. (Probably later facsilime newspaper issue) very fragile.

Collected over 50 years from the 1950's.

An Example:

The Bytown Gazette, and Ottawa and Rideau Advertiser.

Thursday, April 8, 1841. Vol. V. No. 40. Bytown (Ottawa). The Gazette.

1841. |folio, 53x 39.5cm, (21"x 15.5") one sheet folded to 4 pages printed in 6 column format with Header Titles, advertisements, poetry, folded again to roughly 4to by the original owner, some tearing along creases including one tear of c. 4" on the gutter side but all considered else very good condition

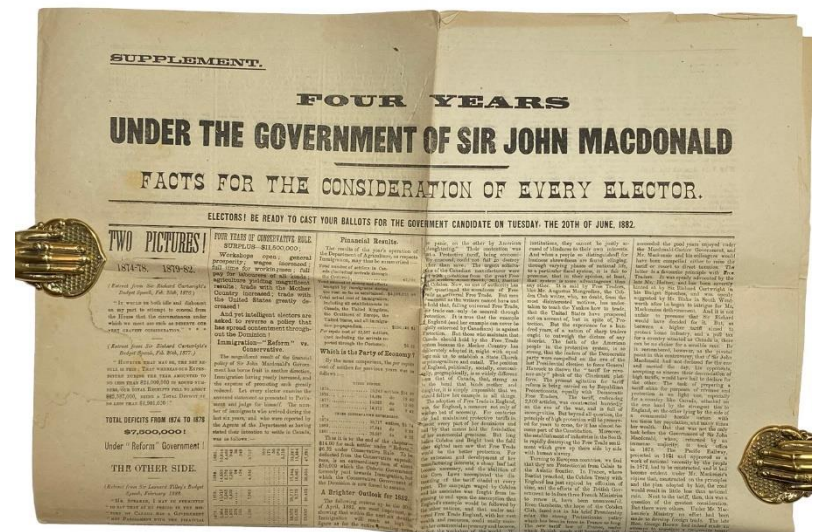

This issue contains an interesting series of vituperative (admonishing) letters between William Stewart and G.W. Baker, competing candidates in the elections of 1841, for Representative for Bytown. Bytown being associated primarily with lumbering trade, there is an appropriate article on the lumber trade. -- Surviving nineteenth and twenty century newspapers are inherently fragile, nearly always found folded they have tears at the folds, as are these... considering these are good to very good

Gagnon notes that Harmon's account, with that of Gabriel Franchere and Alexander Henry, are the three most important and valuable sources we have on the Canadian West. Harmon, a partner in the North West Company, travelled throughout the Great Lakes and Western Canada, 1800-1819. He journeyed upwards of 5,000 miles through Lake Superior, from Fort William to Lake Winnipeg, and through the Assiniboine and Athabaska districts. The map shows tribal locations of the Plains and Mountain Indians. This copy is complete with the four key elements, half-title, portrait, map, errata-slip, one or more of which is usually missing.

"Editor Daniel Haskel took some liberties with the narrative and the moral and religious tones woven into that are hardly consistent with life on the Indian frontier. Hill. "... Collection of Pacific Voyages". #806 (1729 edition). "Heylyn's popular historical geography was revised, enlarged, and reprinted at least nine times between its first publication in 1621 and his death in 1662. Especially noteworthy is the setion on America, which occupied 40 pages.

"...He was the writer of the "Cosmographie", an attempt to describe in meticulous detail every aspect of the known world in 1652, the geography, climate, customs, achievements, politics, and belief systems. It appears to have been the first description in print of Australia, and perhaps of California, Terra del Fuego, and other territories in the New World. He objected to the name "America" as it placed undue glory on Amerigo Vespucci, and recommended "Columbana" or "Cabotia" as more indicative of the true discoverers, Columbus and Cabo" Wiki.

Not in O'Dea, (nor any edition); Church; Lande; Howes; Gagnon; McKinney; T.P.L. cf 87. "Cosmography in four books" the later expanded edition in 1682.

This is a famous work of historical geography, encyclopedic in nature, giving us a glimpse of a young Oxford man's knowledge (with all its deficiencies) of the world in 1621, the original date of publication. When the author comes to Siena, for example, he tells us of the Sienese Pope Pius II, and as he moves through Germany, he describes the spread of Lutheranism. The first edition contained the remark that "France is a greater and more famous kingdom" than England. The author diplomatically explained to the outraged James I that "is" was a mistake for "was," but wisely thought it best to cut the sentence from subsequent editions. Well over half the volume is devoted to Europe, and the Near East, as the land of the Bible, is also extensively described. The African section is focused on North Africa, with Egypt taking the lion's share, and almost no knowledge of sub-Saharan Africa except for Madagascar is manifested. Heylyn opens his final section, on America, with the prescient remark that instead of "America," "this great tract of land ought, and that most aptly, to be called the New World; New for the late discovery, and World, for the vast spaciousness of it." He tells of Columbus and has a good deal of information on Mexico, Nicaragua, Brazil, Peru, and Cuba. Heylyn mentions Virginia, Florida, and the French discoveries in Canada, but the rest of North America is a blank to him, as he wrote only a year after the pilgrims had arrived on its shores. Peter Heylyn (1600-62) was a lecturer on historical geography at Oxford; this book constitutes, in effect, his lecture notes. An advocate of high-church Anglicanism, Heylyn won the favor of Charles I and Archbishop Laud, and opposed the Parliamentarians as well as Prynne for his writing of Histrio-mastix. The present work is his first; Heylyn, to whom controversy was meat and drink, went on to pen more than 50 more books. Early editions of this work are uncommon to begin with and are rarely found, as here, in unrepaired original bindings.

Provenance: From the collection of noted Nova Scotia & Maritimes collector Dr. Franklin Hicks. Beautifully posed there is something very attractive and slightly sad expressed in this view of the famous Nova Scotia born actress who was born in Dartmouth, in 1909, one of six siblings in an Irish Catholic family.

"Ethel Ruby Keeler[1] (August 25, 1909[1] – February 28, 1993) was an American actress, dancer, and singer who was paired on-screen with Dick Powell in a string of successful early musicals at Warner Bros., particularly 42nd Street (1933). From 1928 to 1940, she was married to actor and singer Al Jolson. She retired from show business in the 1940s, but made a widely publicized comeback on Broadway in 1971".

Of the many hundreds of pictures one can see of this lady, this to me, is among the best.

Lahontan came to New France in 1683 as captain of a regiment, which he led in expeditions against the Iroquois. In 1687 he went West with Duluth and was placed in command of Fort St. Joseph on the St. Clair River. He left this post in 1688 and, travelling westward by the Fox-Wisconsin portage, reached the upper Mississippi. In this work, he claims to have navigated the River Long which, he says, flows into the Mississippi from the west, and to have wintered there; he also gives elaborate descriptions of the natives whom he met there and of the physical features of the terrain through which he passed. This portion of the work is now considered fictitious; the rest of the work, however, is generally accurate, and is one of the first comprehensive descriptions we have of the western part of the continent.

From the library of the "Bibliothèque Chateau des Ormes". While the collation of the "globe" issues are precisely the same as that of the "ornament" issue, the title-pages ... "are printed entirely in black ink, and the plates are superior to those in the "ornament" issue. The "globe issue has corrections in the place-nomenclature on the maps, and some additions of places on these maps have also been noticed." - (Paltsits). (hoL)

Matthew Fontaine Maury was an American oceanographer, meteorologist and officer in the United States Navy. He became the first superintendent of the U.S. Naval Observatory in 1842. This book is his best known work, a comprehensive study of winds, ocean currents and navigation, composed from years of examining logs and charts of naval captains which he found in storage trunks at the Observatory. His publications and system of recording nautical data was used to develop charts for major trade routes. First published in 1855 it was reprinted many times.

Generally regarded as the first book printed in Montreal. There was apparently, an issued printed in Philadelphia, without imprint. This edition was printed for the Seminary of St. Sulpice. Most of the original bindings were in boards covered with a figured wall paper. Mesplet lost most of his printing and binding materials in a boating accident on his way to Montreal. Necessity the use of found material like using wall paper for marbled paper on this issue. Typical of the difficulties the early settlers commonly encountered.

Fleury Mesplet was born about 1735 in St. Nizier, France. He engaged in printing and moved, probably in 1773, to London, where he met Benjamin Franklin who encouraged him to immigrate to Philadelphia. In 1776 he was commissioned by the Continental Congress to accompany its commissioners, Franklin, Chase and Carroll, to Montreal to establish there a French press. He moved his equipment from Philadelphia, the journey occupying from March 18 to May 6, 1776. When the Americans evacuated soon afterwards the item above was printed, the first in Montreal. He continued to operate through economic and political vicissitudes, until his death in 1794. He is credited with at least 70 books, pamphlets, etc., including the Montreal Gazette, which he founded in 1785 and which still exists.

51. [MUSIC]. VILLA-LOBOS, Heitor (1887-1959).

(miniature score, for orchestra, duration 18 min.). Presentation copy, to a well-known member of the Montreal Symphony Orchestra, signed by Villa-Lobos on the second sheet. Heitor Villa-Lobos was a much admired Brazilian composer who gained respect not only from his compatriots but also from musicians, artists and writers world-wide. He was born in Rio de Janeiro and studied the cello with his father, who was a librarian. He became fascinated with local musical heritage, and made two trips, in 1905 to the north-eastern Brazilian states, and in 1912 to the Amazonian interior, in search of native folk songs. This music proved to be inspirational in his future works, which received much acclaim for their originality. Villa-Lobos was offered a government grant to study music in Paris from 1923-1930, and on his return was named director of music education in Rio de Janeiro. He devised a method of teaching choral music to school children, incorporating the folk songs he had collected in his travels. The Uirapuru is an Amazonian bird, as well as a mythological creature. The bird sings only once a year, for a few minutes in the morning while building its nest, "the sound is melodic and beautiful. There is a belief that a human being is transformed after death into an uirapuru, whose song breathes life into the quiet of the forest. Villa-Lobos' Uirapuru was first presented as a ballet in Buenos Aries on May 25th, 1935.

Howes R284. Clark I: 295. Sabin 71300. Not in Amicus.

Called the third edition by Howes, preceded only by a privately printed edition for the family and the first published edition, both of the previous year.

Although bibliographers often attribute this book to both Riedesels, it was in fact written by Mrs. Riedesel. Friedrich Riedesel was in command of the German troops sent to Canada in February of 1776 to aid the British. His wife joined him there in the spring of 1777 and accompanied him on the campaign under Burgoyne which went south into New York that fall, ending in the defeat and surrender of all of Burgoyne's forces at Saratoga on October 17, 1777. The Riedesels were then captives of the Americans (although under loose parole), first at Cambridge and then in Virginia, whence the captive army was moved in late 1778. There life was quite pleasant, and the prisoners became friendly with Thomas Jefferson. Later they spent time in Pennsylvania, Bethlehem, New York and Canada, before finally returning to Europe in 1783. "Mme Riedesel's narrative and descriptions are written with impressive directness and simplicity; there is a quality of genuineness about them that bespeaks her sterling character and the honesty of her record" - Clark.

Rolph was impressed by the potential of Canada, and indeed for a time was Emigration Agent for the Government of Canada. His careful account of the weather, settlements, and employment opportunities was intended to encourage immigration. He was aware that Britons were apt to think of Canada as a region of ice and snow, home to trappers and Indians.

He visited Upper and Lower Canada at a time of civil stress, but he was confident that "the soundness" of the majority would prevent a break with the British Crown. Blessed with navigable lakes, the mighty St. Lawrence seaway, arable land, a healthy climate and trifling taxes, Rolph considered Canada an excellent land for industrious artisans and people of some capital. ". . . in Upper Canada, a native of Great Britain can hold property at once, becomes eligible to every office, and is indeed and in fact fully entitled to all the rights and privileges he enjoyed at home, and happily exempt from all the burdens which must necessarily co-exist with a huge national debt.

The first five chapters give an interesting account of a three months visit to Barbados which draws a very favourable picture of life in that colony. He also visited St. Thomas and New York State but the larger part is devoted to a detailed picture of Upper Canada.

Includes mentions of the English settlement in America and the West Indies, 1620 & 1634.

Sabin 78376 & 78377. S.T.C. 22098 & 22103.3. Alden. European Americana 620/145 & 624/139. Church 380A (1st title only). Alden claims the actual printing to have been done in London by Okes and Dawson, but there is no entry in the Stationers' Register that supports that claim. The author, a political writer, was living in Utrecht at the time and the work was no doubt published in the Netherlands. The dedication to the first part is to the King and Queen of Bohemia, &c. and to Maurice, Prince of Orange, and is signed "T.S. of V" (i.e. of Utrecht). When Count Gondomar arrived in England from Spain to arrange the preliminaries for the marriage of Prince Charles with the Infanta, Scott published this impudent work to protest the match. It is a facetious tract about the Count's imagined reception back in Spain where, Scott states, Gondomar promises to bring England into subjugation to Spain and offers that he has promises from prominent Recusants that they will help stay the English settlements in America and the West Indies. The work was widely received by the general public as the truth, and was suppressed by royal authority. The engraved title to the Second Part shows Gondomar's "chair of ease" and the "donkey litter"; on A4v is the well-known reference to Drake and Howard playing at bowls as the appearance of the Spanish Armada is announced.

64. [EPHEMERA].

Leaves from a mid-19th century scrapbook. n.p., c.[1850]. 4to; pp.[10]., removed; one leaf loose; watermark of R. Munn & Co. (active 1836-1858) on one leaf. Contents: p.[2]: Poem, handwritten, "The Petition of the Letter H to the Inhabitants of Shrewsbury." signed Robt. Evans Trin. Coll. Cam. Two lines have transcription errors; p. [3]: a watercolour of a man and boy on horseback, signed Bala 1836. In the left margin Lady Delamere's name is written in pencil; verso is To The Right Honorable Lady Delamere. P. [5] has a printed poem, The Dying Girl Her Lover, signed S.C., laid down, clipped from The Literary Gazette, London, Vol. 23, 1839; an ink drawing of a dog is on the same page. Pages 6, 8 and 9 have clippings laid down from The Albion, New York, 1839. 300.00

Although a letter to the editor of Salopian Shreds and Patches, June 6, 1877, suggests that he is the author, the attribution of the poem on p. 2 to cleric Robert Wilson Evans (1789-1866), may be misleading. The verse and its response were very popular and frequently reprinted in 19th century British journals, addressed not only to the inhabitants of Shrewsbury, but of many other counties in England. The editor of the satirical Grub-Street Journal of January 24, 1734 was the first to publish a complaint from the "Humble Petitioner H" who decried the punishing pronunciation of h-letter words. The watercolour on p. [3] may have been painted by Henry Bala Blunt, who was active ca.1837-ca.1843. Henriette Elizabeth Cholmondeley, Lady Delamere (1786-1852) was the wife of Thomas Cholmondeley, Baron Delamere, of Vale Royal Abbey, Cheshire. The Literary Gazette was an influential and very popular literary magazine published in London from 1817 to 1863. The Albion was "a British colonial and foreign weekly gazette" published in New York from 1822 to 1869.

The Petition of the letter H, to the inhabitants of Shrewsbury.

*Whereas by you I have been driven
From home, from home, from home from heaven,
And placed by your most learned Society,
In exile, anguish and anxiety,
And used without one just pretence,
With arrogance and insolence;
I here demand full restitution
And beg you to mend your education.
Audience of the Inhabitants of Shrewsbury to the letter H.*

*Whereas we've ejected you in haste,
From hell, from home, and from hate,
From handcuff, horse-pouch, and frow-halter,
And consecrated you in altar,
And placed you where you ne'er should be,
In honour and in haste,
We deem this talking an intrusion
And shall not mend our education.*

Mid-1930s: Wilhelm & Elizabeth Hollbach received the book from Dr Robert Drill who was Jewish and fleeing Germany with minimal possessions, moving to South Africa. Dr Drill and Wilhelm Hollbach were colleagues and friends. Dr Robert Drill worked at the Frankfurter Zeitung newspaper with Reiner Hollbach's father Wilhelm Hollbach (link is to wikipedia page about Wilhelm - he was editor of the newspaper and acting mayor of Frankfurt immediately after the war).

Post-WW II: In Germany, Elgen Hollbach received the book from their mother Elizabeth Hollbach after the Second World War, when she (Elgen) became interested in psychotherapy and later became a licensed psychotherapist. The inscription (see above) is assumed to be written by Elizabeth Hollbach.

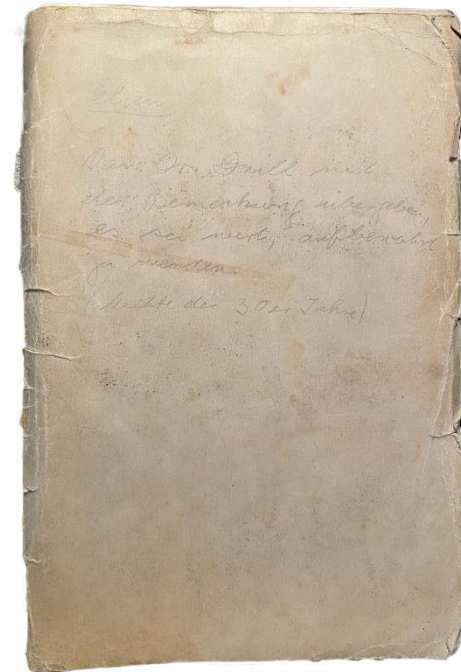

Mid-1990s: The book was received by Canadian relatives from Elgen Hollbach from Germany.

Printing and the Mind of Man. 389.

Sigmund Freud (1856-1939). Die Traumdeutung. Leipzig & Lienna. Deuticke. 1900.

Freud qualified as a doctor in 1881. In 1883 he took the advice of Josef Breuer, a practicing physician and a family friend, and began to specialize in neurology. In 1885 he went to Paris and studied under J.M. Charcot, the greatest neurologist of his day. One of the most impressive of Charcot's demonstrations was to induce the symptoms of hysteria in normal patients under hypnosis. This indicated clearly that hysteria was a mental affliction and not necessarily a symptom of organic disorder. After his return to Vienna Freud read a paper on the subject before the Gesellschaft der Aertze which was not treated with the seriousness it deserved.

In 1889 Freud went to Nancy to witness the experiments in hypnosis of Hippolyte Bernheim, whose work, like that of Charcot, he translated into German. These were experiments in post-hypnotic suggestion; and what impressed Freud most deeply was the reluctance of the subject to divulge the true reason for his actions. Only after persistent questioning were false reasons abandoned and the truth disclosed. Freud suggested to Breuer a joint study of the subject, combining Breuer's knowledge with that gleaned from Charcot and Bernheim. Breuer was a much older man but eventually his reluctance to resume interest in the subject was conquered by Freud's persistence. In January 1893 they published jointly a paper in the Neurologisches Centralblatt on the treatment of hysteria, which was followed in 1895 by Studien über Hysterie.

Very briefly, what they had done was to reverse Charcot's experiment. He induced hysteria in normal subjects under hypnosis — they used hypnosis to release hysterical patients from their affliction. Their experience was that patients who could be induced to recall the circumstances associated with the onset of hysteria would thus purge themselves of the disorder. For this reason they called their methods 'cathartic'.

Freud, however, had learned from Bernheim that subjects would be unlikely to know the reasons for their actions, because they were buried deep in what Freud called the 'unconscious mind'. Only by allowing the patient to talk at random was it possible eventually to unearth the true cause of the trouble. This was called 'free association'. It will be seen that not only had some of the essentials of what was to become psychoanalysis already emerged by 1895 but that a revolution in mental therapy had been adumbrated.

'Studies in Hysteria' made impact only in so far as its conclusions were fiercely contested by the medical profession: Krafft-Ebing, in 1896, in the chair at one of Freud's papers, described it as 'a scientific fairy-tale'. Yet bitter disappointment did not diminish Freud's enthusiasm. In 1894-5 he was already developing his theories of obsessional neuroses, which explained the remoteness of 'replacement ideas' as the covering up of painful experiences; and also the most controversial of all his theories, that the painful experiences were usually of sexual origin.

Although not published until 1900 'The Interpretation of Dreams' was virtually complete in all essentials at the beginning of 1896. Extending the wish-fulfillment nature of day-dreams to night-dreams, Freud differentiated the two kinds of wish: those in day-dreams being open conscious, while the less pleasant subjects were repressed, to be released from the sub-conscious only in sleep when the censorship of consciousness is relaxed.

This is unquestionably Freud's greatest single work. It contains all the basic components of psychoanalytic theory and practice; the erotic nature of dreams, the 'Oedipus complex', the libido, and the rest; all related to the background of the 'unconscious', later to be called the 'sub-conscious'.

Graesse I-71. BM 19-50. RLIN lists 5 copies. Pontius Meropius Anicius Paulinus was born into a wealthy Roman family in Bordeaux and was educated by the poet Ausonius. His career as a lawyer and senator included distinguished appointments in various parts of Italy, but he gradually became disillusioned with political life. He converted to Christianity, and began distributing his wealth to the poor. After the death of their infant son, Paulinus and his wife Therasia established a religious community at the shrine of St. Felix in Nola.

The site included a monastery, basilica and guest houses for pilgrims. Paulinus' letters and lyrical poems, written between 395 and 431, tell of the depth of his continuous spiritual inquiry, but also describe the practical concerns of his mission in Nola. In Epistle no. 12 (numbered 32 in editions where the letters are organized by date), he discusses his plans for the construction and ornamentation of the new basilica, particularly the inscriptions that adorned the doorways and arches linking the buildings.

Paulinus' collected letters and poems were first published in Paris in 1516. In this later edition, the letters are grouped by addressee, the majority to Paulinus' friend Sulpicius Severus (c.360-425). The preface and commentary are by Heribertus

Rosweyde (1569-1629), a Jesuit scholar and the initial author of the Acta Sanctorum, a multi-volume hagiography published between 1643 and 1794. The printers, Balthasar Moretus, Ioannes Moretus II, and Jean van Meurs, successors to the famous Plantin press, were active in Antwerp between 1618 and 1629.

Das II. Capitel.

Weman sich von der heuchlerischen und heydnischen Weise zu beten zu seinem wahren Gott wohlgefälligen Gebet wenden / und einen rechten Grund dazu legen solle.

Matth. V, v. 5. und 7. Wenn du beteest / solt du nicht seyn wie die Heuchler / die da gerne stehen und beten in den Schulen / und an den Ecken auf den Gassen / auf daß sie von den Leuten gesehen werden. Warlich ich sage euch / sie haben ihren Lohn dahin. Und wenn ihr betet / solt ihr nicht viel plappern wie die Heyden: Denn sie meynen / sie werden erhört / wenn sie viel Worte machen.

In diesen Worten warnet uns der Heyland für der heuchlerischen / und für der heydnischen Weise zu beten. Darum ist dieses das erste / wenn wir recht wollen beten lernen / daß wir uns hüten für diesen beyden verdammlichen Arten zu beten. Die Heuchelei ist in Gottes Augen noch ein größerer Greuel / als das Heydnische Wesen; ob zwar vor Menschen Augen die Heuchelei nicht so schein heinbarlich böse ist / als ein offenbar böses Leben. Ein Heuchler sündigt zwiefach: erstlich / daß er böse ist / zum andern / daß er mit einem heiligen Schein seine Schalkheit verbirget. Paulus beschreibet die Heuchelei: Wo der Schein ist des gottseligen Wesens / und die Krafft verlängnet wird / 2. Timoth. III, v. 5. Und Petrus ermahnet auch die jenigen / so jetzt wiedergeböhren sind aus dem unvergänglichen Saamen des lebendigen Wortes Gottes / daß sie alle Arten der Heuchelei ablegen sollen / 1. Ep. 1 / v. 23. und Epy 2 / v. 1. An sich selbst zwar ist die Heuchelei ein Laster / und ein Schlangen Saame: und kan sich der Wiedergeböhrene für dem Unwiedergeböhrenen keines Dinges rühmen von sich selbst / sondern nur aus der Gnade Gottes. Bey dem Unwiedergeböhrenen aber ist die Heuchelei eine herrschende Sünde / welche er weder recht erkennet / noch dargegen von Herzen kämpffet / noch sie durch den Glauben überwindet. Den Wiedergeböhrenen klebet diese natürliche Unart an / aber sie erkennen durch den Geist Gottes / daß ihnen solche umb Christi willen vergeben ist / und lassen dieselbe nicht mehr über sich herrschen / sondern streiten dagegen / und überwinden sie durch den Glauben. Doch wird eben umb deswillen auch der Wiedergeböhrene für der Heuchelei gewarnt: weil in dieser Sterblichkeit das Fleisch noch allezeit gelüftet wider den Geist / und kein leicht

American Imprints 14631 (4 locations); NUC cites only one location; this edition not in Lowndes; vide Caldwell. The Era of Napoleon, 1991, #18621, but not this edition.

Sir Walter Scott (1771-1832) first published his influential biography on Napoleon in 9 volumes, in Edinburgh, 1827. It was published, according to some, to prevent impending bankruptcy and although it succeeded in the latter goal, the work was too long to be popular (Caldwell, p.500). As a result, many abridged editions followed. The original Exeter edition was printed in 1827 and a second Exeter appeared in 1828, followed by this version, which is probably the third printing in America of the work. Scott's biography stirred up some controversy regarding its objectivity, since it portrays Napoleon, unrelentingly, in an unfavourable light. Despite these protests, the work represents an important contemporary contribution to the study of France during the Napoleonic Era.
