Sabin 3667. Barrow, (1764-1848), a founder of the "Royal Geographic Society," was, for some time, Secretary of the Admiralty, 1804-1845. As a geographical compiler he produced several works relating to voyages and discoveries; his Chronological Abridgement of History of the Discoveries made by Europeans in different parts of the world . . . was for many years, a standard. It was thanks to the farsighted support of Barrow, as Secretary of the Admiralty, that the quest for the North-West Passage was resumed. It was to be conducted as a scientific exploration on systematic lines.

2. BERNIER, J.E.

Report on the Dominion of Canada Government Expedition to the Arctic Islands and Hudson Strait on board the D.G.S. "Arctic". [1908-09]. Ottawa. Government Printing Bureau. 1910. 8vo, 23.5cm, The First Edition, xxix,529p., with c.175 plates and illustrations (mainly from photographs by the author) and 4 folding maps, original green cloth, gilt titles, fine condition 200.00

The Arctic islands had been transferred to Canada by an Imperial Order-in-Council, on Sept 1st, 1880. After many foreign incursions, between 1898 - 1902, (Robert Peary, Amundsen, and Sverdrup, who claimed 4 major islands for his homeland) prompted Prime Minister Wilfrid Laurier, to action. First A.P. Low's expedition but it was Bernier who mounted the most extensive campaign to reinforce Canada's dominion over the Arctic. Arctic historian, William Barr, refers to Bernier as "The man who put Canada on the Map". On this expedition, Bernier landed supplies for Dr. Cook at Etah. The "Arctic" then spent the winter of 1908 at Parry's Winter Harbour on Melville Island. They explored Bank's Island and there is discussion of earlier explorations and much Arctic information, including photographs of records found from earlier expeditions by Parry, McClintock, Kellet, McClure, etc. Bernier was one of the earliest and staunchest proponents of Canada's Arctic sovereignty.

The first edition of Lyon's official report of this important expedition, as distinguished from his Private Journal... published the same year. Much, if not most of Lyon's narrative, concerns his relations with the Eskimos, with whom he was on excellent terms. This report includes some material which was not present in his Journal, also three plates of Indian subjects which are also new to this work. The map shows Hudson's Straits and northern Hudson's Bay.

"Lyon, now commanding his own ship, the Griper, records his voyage subsequent to Parry's second exploration. Lyon is always interesting in his comments on the Inuit". Waterston p43.

The Discovery of the North-West Passage

17. M'CLURE, Robert

The Discovery of the North-West Passage by H.M.S. Investigator, Capt. R. M'Clure, 1850, 1851, 1852, 1853, 1854. Edited by Commander Sherard Osborn. From the Logs and Journals of Capt. Robert le M. 1,500.00

Cresswell was on this expedition. Originally starting out as a search for Sir John Franklin by way of the Bering Strait, the expedition accomplished what none before had done, the discovery of the North - West Passage, for which McClure and his crew shared the 10,000 pounds offered by the British Government.

Cf. Arctic Bib. 10563 (for 2nd ed.). Smith 6232. T.P.L. 8507. Lada-Mocarski 145. Sabin 43073. Based on the logs and journals of Capt. Robert Le M. M'Clure, [McClure; Maclure], who commanded the expedition, this book tells the story of the final achievement of the long and devoted quest for the North-West Passage. The Investigator accompanied the Enterprise, under Commander Collinson, to search for Sir John Franklin. The narrative describes the perils from the ice in the Beaufort Sea, contains remarks on the progress of the Franklin Search, and a great deal of detailed information on Arctic wildlife. The Investigator also explored Banks Island, penetrated Prince of Wales Strait and spent three winters imprisoned by ice on the north shore of Banks Island. Here they were met in April, 1853, by a party from the Resolute (M'Dougall), which was anchored 160 miles away east of Melville Island. The Investigator's crew sledged to the Resolute and returned eastward with its crew to England, thus completing the first ocean to ocean passage north of America.

18. McKEEVOR, Thomas

The First English Edition

19. NANSEN, Fridtjof

Farthest North. Being the Record of a Voyage of Exploration of the ship "Fram" 1893-96 and of a Fifteen Months' Sledge Journey by Dr. Nansen and Lieut. Johansen. With an Appendix by Otto Sverdrup. London. Constable & Co. 1897. tall8vo, 24cm, the First English Edition, in Two Volumes, 510 & 671pp., with 120 full-page and numerous text illustrations, inc. 16 colour plates from Dr. Nansen's own sketches, etched frontis portrait photogravure, and 4 rear folding maps, in the original gilt decorated blue green cloth, with gilt stamped illustrations of The 'Fram' in gilt frame border on the upper covers, some slight foxing on the edges otherwise a fine bright set certainly scarce in this condition 900.00

Nansen, one of the most significant figures in the history of Arctic exploration, was originally a naturalist. He decided in 1888 to attempt the crossing of Greenland, and with five companions, including Otto Sverdrup, set off in June of that year. The crossing, by small boat, ski and sledge, achieved many important scientific objectives, including meteorological observations, as well as illustrating the ideal methods of Arctic travel. His most important achievements were on the Fram Expedition of 1893-96. He established the nature and drift of the Arctic Ice-pack, having deliberately allowed the ship, built to his own design, to be frozen into the ice. During the expedition, Nansen, with one companion and 3 dog sledges, achieved the highest latitude yet attained (86°14').

T.P.L. 1362. A.B. 13144. Sabin 58867. Hill 1313. Severe ice conditions forced this expedition to winter on the west coast of Baffin Island. Fury was damaged in Prince Regent Inlet and was abandoned in August 1825, forcing the expedition home.

“Parry again set out in May, 1824, but was obliged to abandon the Fury, he returned to England in the Hecla, having accomplished little. The second and third voyages of Parry, like the first, were unsuccessful in the goal of discovering the Northwest passage. However, Parry did discover and name the Fury and Hecla Strait and he collected additional scientific information about the Arctic region of North America. The appendix contains an important record of the scientific observations and material upon the natural history of the Arctic regions. ...”Hill.

22. PHIPPS, Constantine John

A Voyage towards the North Pole undertaken by His Majesty's Command, 1773. London. Printed by W. Bowyer & J. Nichols, for J. 30. SIMPSON, Thomas

Narrative of The Discoveries on The North Coast of America; Effected by the Officers of the Hudson's Bay Company during the years 1836-39. London. Richard Bentley. 1843. 8vo 22.4cm, (tall copy), The First Edition, xix,419p., with 3 maps on 2 folding sheets in rear pocket, appendix, in the original blind decorated brown cloth, gilt spine titles, expertly rebacked (early), the original endpapers are acidic, the text is somewhat tanned as usual, some slight edge wear on the boards, a very good to fine copy of the rare first edition 3,500.00

Note: the original cloth on this copy is among the best we have seen. The acidic endpapers probably contributed to the scarcity of this important book. A quick survey of the auction records back to 1923, listing 50 copies, indicates that about half the copies were bound in calf. Nearly half the cloth copies had binding defects.

Simpson and Peter Dease led an overland expedition sent by the Hudson's Bay Company to explore the coast of the Arctic Ocean from the Mackenzie River. Eastward they reached Point Barrow in 1837, thus filling the gaps between Beechey's and Franklin's discoveries; westward they almost reached the mouth of the Back River, and crossed over to Victoria and King William Islands mapping their south shores in 1839. Dease Lake was named after Peter Warren Dease by H.B.C. chief trader, John McLeod, as was Dease Strait by Sir John Franklin. Dease joined Franklin's British Arctic land expedition, 1825-1827.

American Bookshelf, pp.87-91.

Howes. Douglass was a Scottish physician living in Boston. Although not a work noted for its accuracy, Wroth comments, "Modern critics of the SUMMARY have overlooked the fact that its author was the first to attempt this story from the viewpoint of a resident American.," and further quotes a contemporary critic in the MONTHLY REVIEW as finding it "a fuller and more circumstantial account of North America, than is any where else to be met with." In his PRESENT STATE OF NORTH AMERICA (London, 1755) John Huske wrote: "There is not one Work yet published to the World in our Language that in any Degree deserves the Title of a History of North America, but Smith's HISTORY OF VIRGINIA, and Douglass's SUMMARY. And this last is only valuable for being the best Collection of facts in general, for a future Historian, that was ever made or published." The completion and publication of the work was interrupted by Douglass' death during the outbreak of the smallpox epidemic of 1752. A work of major importance in the writing of American history.

Not in "Canadian Customs and Excise, An Annotated Bibliography" (1979), nor in Aurora or World Cat.

Prohibition in the United States ran from 1920 to 1933. The Report is addressed to George Boivin, Minister of Customs and Excise, regarding an investigation concerning alcohol smuggling from Quebec into the United States involving a Customs and Excise employee in Montreal. Due to indifference to the government scandal by Boivin and the Department, Duncan resigned; "I have done my duty fearlessly, honestly and indiscriminately. Is it my reward for doing my duty to be slandered in the Public Press from Coast to Coast through a statement made by an Honourable Minister of the Crown on the floor of the House?" - Perhaps designation "Confidential" accounts for the pamphlet's rarity.

51. GRANT, George Munro [edited by]

Picturesque Canada: The Country As It Was and Is. Illustrated under the supervision of L.R. O'Brien. Toronto. Belden Bros. [1882]. 34cm, folio. in the original 36 parts, ix,440 & xii(441)-880pp., with 36 plate views on heavy stock paper and over 500 wood-engraved full-page and text illustrations, in the original printed wraps, in near fine condition, noteworthy in this condition 400.00

One of the first comprehensive topographical view books to cover the entire country and for most people, one of their first looks at the country as a whole. This edition was issued in thirty-six monthly issues between 1882 to 1884, each with a fine front view on heavier stock paper. It represented wood-engraving at it best, particularly on these plates. These are sometimes described as steel engravings which they are not but they are that good. The parts were issued again in 1894; Toronto. James Clarke, Publisher. 1894, published weekly), but only on cheaper paper with these plates printed in the text. The picture editor was Lucius R. O'Brien, prominent Canadian artist and first president of the Royal Canadian Academy. George Munro Grant, principal of Queen's University, Kingston, and the author of books on Canada, wrote a few of the parts here. See Dennis Reid. Our Own Country Canada" p 298.

"This travel diary contains several factual descriptions of Toronto and Upper Canada in the late 1830s. After leaving Toronto, Jameson encounters Indian, settlers and voyageur life first-hand, and her unfavourable first impressions of Canadian society are dramatically reversed. The author's highly personal observations and her sudden adaptation to the new environment give a fictional dimension to her account". Fee & Cawker. Canadian Fiction.

Anna Jameson was a noted English bluestocking, whose acquaintances included the Schlegels, Tieck and Ottilie von Gothe. Indeed, it was with the greatest reluctance that she left Europe and joined her husband, (the Attorney-General), in Toronto. However, once there, her active intelligence combined with an equally active distaste for her husband's company provided the incentive for travel and observation. From 1836 to 1838 she travelled throughout the Province gaining impressions of the scenery, society and historical background of Upper Canada. One of the finest set pieces is a description of a fire in the Irish quarter; born in Dublin (her father was a famous Irish miniature painter), she describes the plight of the victims with great feeling. However, she remained unmoved by the sight of Niagara Falls, writing "it was sung to me in my cradle that I should live to be disappointed - even in the Falls of Niagara".

Charles Latrobe, author of The Alpenstock, was a "confessed cascade hunter". He pierced into Canada twice during his American tour, once crossing from Buffalo to Niagara and back via London to Detroit, the other time crossing the mountains of northern Maine through to the valley of the Chaudière, proceeding to the Falls on the Saint-Maurice, Grand'Mère, "Shawinnegane", and the little falls at Les Chats, and back to the American side. In Upper Canada, chatting with Indians at the Moravian mission, he noted sadly that most wore European costume, with the exception of the aged Old Boar, who wore "leggings and a scalp lock". London he glumly dismissed; he agreed with his friend Washington Irving that the Canadian provinces held "no particular interest". (Watterston)

Latrobe came to America in 1832 in an attempt to take the young Swiss Count de Pourtales away from home and to experience some excitement in the wild countries. In the course of the next two years, the two went on four trips to the South, as well in the West where they went buffalo hunting with Henry L. Ellsworth and Washington Irving (to whom the book is dedicated). Irving described Latrobe as "a man of a thousand occupations; a botanist, a geologist, a hunter of beetles and butterflies, a musical amateur, sketcher of no mean pretensions... a very indefatigable, if not always a very successful, sportsman." Clark - "There is a good description of a Florida plantation."

"Charles Mair, 1838-1927, poet, was born at Lanark, Upper Canada. Educated at Queen's, Kingston, he became first a journalist, and was one of the originators of the "Canada First" movement in 1868. In 1870 he represented the Montreal Gazette during the Riel rebellion, and was imprisoned and narrowly escaped being shot by the rebels. He spent the rest of his life in the West, either on the prairies or in British Columbia, was an officer of the Governor-General's Body Guard during the second Riel Rebellion in 1885, and was later employed in the Canadian civil service in the West. ... Sabin 65378. Story p104. Matthews p98. Dionne II-1192. Gagnon I- 2804. Lande 724. T.P.L. 2302. There is no mistaking the element of pique in the disdainful comments of Canada made by... Preston's first impressions were gained under unfortunate circumstances. He arrived at Quebec in February 1827, was in Montreal during the riot that precipitated the rebellion in that province, and reached Kingston during the height of the excitement over the outbreak in Toronto under William Lyon Mackenzie. For the rest of his stay he was employed in Toronto. His bias appears in his criticism of the 'stagnant' British colonies as compared to the vigorous life of the United States, while the emergence of vigorous qualities among the second generation of Canadians is deprecated on the ground that young Canadians would be far better employed in agriculture or business than in over-crowding the professions and becoming competitors for public employment. It was Preston's view that Toronto society was pretentious. (Story).

His work in the government service in Toronto 1837-1839; descriptions of the chief towns, politics, economics, business, public works, land grants, condition of the Indians, settlers, etc..

67. [ROBERTSON Masson Company].

A collection of over fifty documents between Montreal based, Robertson Masson Company and numerous clients primarily in Upper Canada and dated from 1836 to 1844. Although several are completed from printed documents, most are hand-written and include bills of sale, receipts, correspondence (mostly about methods of payment), and even a deed (Prescott) and letter of reference (Bytown). The documents originate from all parts of Upper Canada including Bytown, Kingston, Prescott, Chatham, Cobourg, Belleville, St. Catharines, Hamilton, Brockville, Kempville and Oshawa.

The Robertson Masson Company was an import/export company with Hugh Robertson managing the Glasgow side and Joseph Masson (1791-1847), the Montreal part. From the documentation, potash and grain appear to be the primary exports. Items needed in the Canadas were imported, particularly textiles. The company was one of the leading Quebec companies of the nineteenth century and expanded into banking and into shipping and canal building. The documents provide a unique insight into the scope of the business.
