This is the only picture in the world with a wind mill, a thatch roof cottage and a stone arch bridge in Ungava.

Ballantyne drew largely on his own experiences when a clerk in the service of the Hudson's Bay company in the 1840's. However, topographical and other details were checked against Mackenzie's, Voyages from Montreal...

Allan Cooke, when asked how he got interested in the Arctic said, he was on Sherbrooke Street opposite McGill, walking along trying to think what he could do for the summer when, one of his professors yelled to him from across the street, “Allan, how would you like to go to Unganda on a expedition for the summer”. He replied he would. “Good”, he said, “I’ll sign you up, come and see me next Tuesday morning”. However when he got there he was to learn it was Ungava he had said, not Unganda.

The story of Krieghoff’s life is related in a lively manner, together with a critical study of the development of his art. This is followed by a chronological list of dated pictures, notes from published and army records, letters and recollections of contemporaries, notes on the family and on Krieghoff’s pictures and books, and a catalogue of works, divided by theme and giving basic citations and commentary for each picture. - Leren & Williamson. 6083.
17. BATES, Walter

Henry Moore Smith. The Mysterious Stranger. Being an Authentic Account of the Numerous Arrests, Remarkable Doings and Wonderful Escapes of the Most Noted Agent who ever Pestered the Authorities of New Brunswick. St. John, N.B. John A. Bowes. 1910. 22cm, first edition 164,[4],p. ads., in the original printed wraps, bottom wrapper chipped, wrinkled but not stained, on fragile paper, very good 45.00

"A contribution to the spate of real or invented life stories of criminals, the book gives a vivid picture of the barbarous condition under which criminals were confined. It was based on fact, for 'the mysterious stranger' was Henry Moon (Henry More Smith), a notorious horse thief who spent some time in the King’s County jail before being pardoned because of insufficient evidence. He then went to the United States where he became involved in other crimes; it is said he may also have been involved in criminal acts in Upper Canada. ...". Story p54.

T.P.L. 4870. cf.Lande 458. Sabin 33366. Howes H737. Matthew 490. Morgan p199. Primarily domestic and personal, the sketches were written with the intention of providing the prospective emigrants with new information on conditions in Canada. The author spent two and half years in Upper Canada, touring the province and visiting the Glengarry and Talbot settlements, Kingston, York, Queenstown, Niagara, Chatham, etc... Howison was deeply impressed by the poor social and moral status of British immigrants in contrast with their improved economic condition. Howison also relates his impressions of Montreal, Quebec, New York, and Philadelphia.
39. JACKSON, A.Y.

A Painter’s Country. The Autobiography of A.Y. Jackson. Vancouver & Toronto. Clarke, Irwin & Co. 1958. 4to. 28cm, xv,170p. the first edition, limited to 1000 copies signed by A.Y. Jackson, this being number 762, on hand-made rag paper, with 12 tipped in colour plates, mapped endpapers, bound in quarter red morocco and red cloth boards, in publishers slip-case with colour plate laid down on the upper cover, a fine copy in near fine slipcase

A.Y. Jackson argues that until shortly before World War 1, Canadians were fairly indifferent toward art, an indifference conquered by future members of the Group of Seven though their belief that Canadian painting should reflect Canada, not Europe. Traces the evolution of that idea, the development and dissolution of the Group, and Jackson’s own wanderings across Canada. ... Lerner & Williamson #5918.

T.P.L. 1500. Lande 592. Sabin 43665. MacTaggart was clerk of works for the building of the Rideau Canal. The text includes his account of the clearing of 160 miles of wilderness from the Ottawa River to Lake Ontario and much on navigation. ~ Born in the parish of Borgue in Kirkcudbright Scotland in 1791 - a son of a peasant. At 25 years of age, in 1816, he wrote and published the "Scottish Gallovidian Encyclopedia"; described as "an astonishing collection of Gallaway words, phrases and customs". H.V. Morton "In Scotland Again" says "It is the real thing, straight from the byre and the furrow, a book that could have been written only by an inspired peasant in whose heart burned, not only great love for his people, but also an acute detached consciousness of their manifold peculiarities". In it he libeled the daughter of a local laird who threatened legal action and in order to avoid proceedings, all available copies were destroyed.

In 1825 he came to Canada where he stayed three years - lost his position under By because of intemperance and returned to Scotland in 1828 and died in 1830 at age of 39. - H.V. Morton. Author of "In Scotland Again"

John MacTaggart was a road builder, surveyor, Clerk of the Works on the Rideau Canal, or, as he put it, "Rummagen General of the Continental Water Communications." Surveying for the Rideau, through bush and swamp, MacTaggart was seized by the vision of this work as - part of a "Grand Canadian Canal" from Quebec to Lake Superior. From thence, "with little trouble they could pass through a notch of the Rockies," and go down Cook's Inlet, to Nootka. Prophetically the Scottish engineer, dream-ed of "stages from London round the world." Meanwhile, camping in a wigwam shanty with hemlock boughs, by the side of Dow's swamp, with a fire of dry cedar bark, MacTaggart and his party groped out the course of the Rideau Canal, living on pork roasted on wooden prongs, plenty of tea and bread, and weak grog. He envisaged a Canadian encyclopedia, which would include "Furrology" and "Stumpology." He envisaged also distilling maple syrup to "drive Yankee whisky into the lakes." Vision, anecdote, geologic detail, and a rag-bags of prejudices and enthusiasms made up Three Years in Canada. In Quebec, "fashionable young fellows follow a good deal the manners of the Americans – drink gin sling, sangaree and lemonade, smoke segars, and in the morning take bitters, cocktail, and soda-water." Ladies in Lower Canada were pretentious: "too great a profusion of flounces, feathers, and ruffles; few good-looking; the climate robs their complexions." The habitants seemed "kind, thoughtless, right-hearted". (Waterston p47).
